“ My strongest memories of Glenn were through the Stratford High School Band. He played the susaphone, creating a good solid bass to the admittedly small band.

My most vivid memories came in spring when we left the band room for the outdoors to practice marching. The sousaphone was an awkward instrument to navigate the halls and doors of SHS, so Glenn would remove the bell and leave it behind. This made the tone of the instrument about a half-tone sharp, but added a snap to the notes he played.

“ A dear friend for over 50 years, Glen will be missed but not forgotten. We have shared so many good memories over those many years and he will always be remembered for his hospitality, hard work, loyalty to his friends and all that he believed in, his love of good food---both eating it and cooking it and shared with him his fondness for Johnny Cash music and John Grisham novels. Till we meet again, dear friend, Joani & Joe
