

James F. Krummel

November 26, 1941 - April 6, 2022

James Frank Krummel (aka Jim, Sir) died April 6, 2022 in the house that he built, fulfilling his lifelong wish of having someone haul his dead body out of the house. He was born in Wausau on November 26, 1941 and was baptized the day Pearl Harbor was bombed. He was married to the woman who put up with his curmudgeonly personality (who according to him “didn’t sweat much for a fat woman”) for 42 years.

He was a Sheet Metal Worker and practiced his trade in many of the factories and paper mills in central Wisconsin. In his free time he could be found working on his house (that he never finished) and enjoying cheap beer. His life philosophy was “the best beer is a free beer”. His many nieces and nephews knew to never pull Uncle Jim’s finger, because another one of his life philosophies was “farts are fun”. He also enjoyed having cookouts and sharing stories around a campfire. After his retirement he liked to travel the country in his camper, especially enjoying the Lake Superior region. Many mornings he could be found with his back to Canada following his favorite Monty Python quote “I fart in your general direction”. He was an avid reader and his family is pretty sure he never threw out a magazine, evidenced by the shelves of periodicals that line the basement walls of his house.

He is survived by many family members and a few friends.

He was preceded in death by his ancestors, who according to him were all “pirates, horse thieves and train robbers”.

Following the misanthrope's wishes there will be no funeral or visitation. There will be a camping cookout party this summer to share stories and beer. Guests will all leave with a stack of magazines. In lieu of flowers, have a shot and a beer in his honor.

“ We loved Jim! He had such a great sense of humor, you could always count on him to make you laugh and smile! He was always the first one in the morning to walk over to Becky and Nicks campsite to see what was going on or cooking! He is remembered always....See you later!
